REDUCTION IN POSTAL RATES ORDERED

BY CONGRESSIONAL GROUP CHANGES IN FIVE CLASSES

Under Consideration--Reduction in the Rate of Private Mailing Cards From Two Cents to One Cent--Newspapers Mailed by Individuals to Be One Cent, Parcel Post Packages Rate Will Be Considerably Reduced--Action On Second Class Matter Postponed.

Material changes in five classes of temporary postal rates approved last year were agreed upon Monday by the special joint congressional committee. They are:

Reduction in the rate on private mailing cards from two cents to one cent.

Reduction of the rate on transient second-class mail matter--newspapers mailed by individuals--to 1 cent.

Establishment of a rate of not more than 2 cents on return postal cards sent out by business firms, with the collection to be made after their return.

Rearrangement of the special handling rate on parcel post packages so that in place of the standard 25 cent charge there will be a graduation with a 15 cent rate for packages weighing not over two pounds; 25 cents for packages weighing from two to 10 pounds and 35 cents for packages over 10 pounds.

A penalty of one cent for each ounce on mail matter on which postage is short paid more than one rate.

While concurring in these changes, Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, disagreed with the majority on several points, proposing a restoration of the 1920 rate on newspapers and other publications with a 50 cent bundle charge rate; reduction of the rate on third class matter from 1½ cents to 1 cent for each two ounces, and abolition of the 2 cent special charge on fourth class mail.

The majority report will be made simultaneously to the senate and house. The latter will act first under the agreement and members of the committee hope to get the majority changes thru at this session, so that the commission can proceed with a study of other rate structures with a view to recommending amendments.

Declaring that it recognized the force of the arguments regarding a return to 1920 second-class rates, the majority said that when statistics for a full year were in it might be possible to "provide" some amelioration of the conditions of which the publishers of newspapers and periodicals now complain.

The majority said it also had in mind the establishment with the third-class mail of subdivisions whereby the larger users of this class of mail could have the benefit of the pound rate, somewhat as granted the users of second-class mail.

"The committee is of the general opinion that the entire structure of fourth-class (parcel post) should be recast," the report said, adding that the committee might ultimately determine that the postmaster general should deal with this class of mail under the authority given him to apply for rates thru the interstate commerce commission.

Hawaiian Girl of 7 Saves 2 From Sea

Hilo, T. H.—Violet Kauka, seven years of age, Hawaiian girl, has been hailed here as a community heroine following the rescue of her younger sister and a playmate who had drifted out to sea in a rowboat.

The two children were playing in the boat and did not notice that it started to drift away from shore. The servant girl in a neighboring beach residence first saw the predicament and started for help. In the meantime the Hawaiian youngster stripped off her clothing and plunged in for the rescue. She successfully negotiated the quarter-mile swim, seized the rope, and towed the children to safety.

Violet learned to swim at the age of five.

Where Gold Was Discovered in New California Field

Lured by the magic word "gold," scores of persons arrive at Kramer, Cal., daily and begin trudging across the desert country, carrying stakes and location notices. Mining engineers and the Herkelrath brothers, whose strike recently stirred the desert into a veritable stampede, are said to have declared their "high grade" will run $3,000 a ton or more. This picture shows a crowd of mining engineers and prospectors at the shaft where gold was first discovered waiting for a bucket of gold ore to be brought to the surface. MAN SHOOT SUCCESSOR KILLS SELF Jealousy in Business Was the Motive For Crime of Charles J. Dalton.

Cincinnati, O., May 11, (UP)—For ten minutes Charles A. Dalton listened to arguments why he should not shoot his successor as president of the Dalton Adding Machine company.

Then he picked up a pistol and shot him.

The fifth shot from his pistol pierced his own heart and killed him instantly.

His victim, Harry Landsiedel, is in a serious condition today.

The tragedy was described by H. C. Grubbs, vice president, who was forced to sit helplessly and await the shooting.

"Landsiedel came to the door and called me into his office about ten minutes of four," Grubbs said today. "As I entered I saw Dalton was standing on the other side of the room. He told me briefly to shut the door. I did and sat down.

"Dalton sat down too, a good six feet from both of us, unwrapped a bundle he carried and produced a pistol.

"He laid it on a corner of the desk. 'I'm going to shoot Landsiedel,' he said, 'and then kill myself.'

"I've been thinking over this a long time. I'm practically out of this business that my father founded. There is no use in arguing."

"For ten minutes I pointed out the consequences of his act, the disgrace, the grief of his and Landsiedel's families."

"Landsiedel secretly pressed a button for his stenographer hoping she would understand the situation and call police. She didn't.

"While I was in the midst of a sentence, Dalton abruptly picked up the gun. 'That's enough' he said, and fired at Landsiedel.

"I leaped toward him and he thrust the gun at me. I leaped behind a door, ran for police. Behind me four shots rang out.

"When we got back, Landsiedel was slumped down in his chair. Dalton was lying on the floor dead."

Landsiedel was shot twice, once in the knee and thru the right lung.

First White-Collar Stowaway Hails Home

New York.—It was a handsome Scottish scarf that won Royal Pichon away from the security and comfort of land about two months ago, but all the woolens from Scotland couldn't coax him back to the waves again. Pichon, who is twenty-five, grew up in New Orleans as a bellhop and then a clerk in hotels. Working in New Orleans, he saw a sailor with the Scottish scarf that invited him away to sea. Working his way across on a freighter, he soon found himself broke in London. Selling his $35 overcoat for two shillings and a worn-out jacket, he hid under the boilers of a liner.

He had four bananas and three rolls for his two shillings. These kept him alive for the two days before he was discovered. He turned his one suit of clothes inside out while he was hidden so that when he landed here he might be presentable.

He was presentable when he was unlocked yesterday, the first white-collar stowaway discovered. "Go to sea again? If I ever go to New Orleans, I'll die there. European liquor isn't what it's cracked up to be."

Variety in Chic Spring Wardrobe

New Mode Expands to Meet Diversified Needs of Modern Woman.

Beginning with the silhouette and the chapeau and continuing to such an inconsiderable accessory as the purse, there is a lack of unanimity on practically every separate item of the new spring mode, asserts a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. You cannot dispute a lady who tells you that spring skirts must be long—at least to temperance with her and she will point to Polret as her authority. Advise some one that the proper hat to wear for the new season will have a narrow brim, and in a moment you will hear the name of some authority who prefers the grande dame type. And so it goes. One designer makes his waistline high, one normal, another low. One makes his silhouette flare, another's is straight, a third is kinetic.

It is interesting enough to contemplate, but the time for decision is at hand. We shall not attempt in this article to suggest what silhouette or waistline to choose for your new spring acquisitions. Instead, we shall attempt to translate the mood of fashion as it should be applied to the various components of the wardrobe. The fundamental struggle, if there be any, is between mannishness and girlishness, and for the moment each has its place—and each, as well, is de trop in the other's province.

Less Masculine.

The popular Worth model is less masculine than the extreme atrocities that were affected a year ago, but clearly it belongs to the masculine line. Under what circumstances is this costume smart? Clearly for the morning or afternoon stroll, the shopping expedition, the spectator's role at golf links or tennis courts or similar occasions. But keep it away from the dance, no matter what the temptation.

The Polret evening gown is at the other end of the gamut. In it you have the contemporary absolute in femininity. The gentle natter blue chiffon, the ingenious silver embroidery, the bolero effect and the semi-bouffant silhouette are all represented. And the quaintly youthful longer skirt is the final touch of real girlishness. Not the merest hint of mannishness lurks about the costume—it would have been considered charmingly feminine even in those gentle prewar days.

We need go no further. What clearly appears is that for formal occasions milady is quite as deliciously feminine as her Victorian forbears, while for the rest of her infinite variety she becomes as informal, severe or sports-like, as the occasion demands.

There is no question of haphazard duality of tendencies. There is no dearthless struggle between two hopelessly divergent types of dress. The modern woman is no creature of volatile moods who must always be one type or another. And the jeune fille will not develop into a concave man.

Scallops and the Combination of Rose and Black Feature Ensemble.

nish species merely because, when indulging in the recreations of her brother, she chooses to dress as sensibly.

It is simply that milady has added to her interests. Instead of being a cloistered bit of femininity all day, dressed in all the frills and furbelows of the late Victorian, she has become a sportswoman, a business woman and a clubwoman as well. And for each of these modern diversions naturally enough she requires a different type of dress. That is all that Patou means when he refers to duality of tendencies, and you need not let it worry you for an instant. The Paris collections must defer to every mood of the modern woman—they therefore include the various types of dress which are essential to each mood, and that is the why and wherefore of the dual mode, which is not really dual but has merely expanded to meet the increased demands of the modern woman.

Gowns for Every Occasion.

For spring Jeanne Lanvin has designed gowns that are suitable for every occasion and for every climate. The most elegant and elegant with a wide variety of pursuits will find within her doors simple little suits for golf or yachting, smart ensembles, exquisite gowns for calling or bridge, languorous tea gowns of richest embroidery and garden party frocks of simplest organdie that are a marvel of handwork, and perhaps better than anywhere else, lovely period gowns that are a delight to wear in the gracious setting of some rare old country house or historic castle.

This season's outstanding note, as far as everyday clothes are concerned, is the circular-cut skirt in the three or four piece ensemble. Jumper, skirt, short jacket and long or three-quarter length overcoat is the most popular interpretation. A light coat and skirt with a dark blouse or a blouse trimmed with dark material is a novel feature. There is a tendency also to introduce variety into the ensemble, making the coat or one item of the whole in a different color and material, yet giving a subtle sense of belonging to the same set.

Kasha, as usual, plays a large and important part in the Lanvin models. There is an apricot kasha coat worn over a navy blue skirt with a navy jumper spotted with white. A beige kasha coat embroidered with a large white motif, characteristically Lanvin is worn over a black taffeta dress. A canary yellow alpaca coat with black and white-striped silk facings is worn over a white shantung dress. This season the Lanvin motif is placed on the right sleeve, on the large draped revers of a coat or dress or on the back of the coat. There are many other clever little individual touches, such as a tiny scarlet bow threaded through one revers of a navy coat frock with box plaits of navy and white polka dot and a scarlet leather belt. Another amusing finish is a narrow red cravette that appears under the collar of a beige suit at the back, forming a cross between the shoulders that is held in place with a red button in the center.

Lanvin uses buttons as a trimming, but she employs them with discretion. Wool embroidery is another form of decoration which she favors. Her new design for this season is a kind of overlapping shell-shaped scallop in shaded silks or wools which she uses on dresses and coats as well as jumpers.

Applied Panthers.

Wide, flat bias tucks are another form of decoration which has appealed to Mme. Lanvin this season. She uses these most effectively in three shades of geranium red to adorn the cross-over corsage and edge the wide sleeves of a black alpaca gown. Animals and other fantastic designs appear on the large patch pockets of sports overcoats. There is one in navy blue leather with a wild boar in silver on the pocket. It is worn over a delightful little jumper dress in light apricot jersey cloth. Another in heavy brown leather has panthers appliqued in the pockets.

Taffeta is used both for the gown that are suitable for everyday town wear and also for the exquisite picture costumes which this time hovers between the periods of 1827 and 1839. Though Lanvin uses every possible color under the sun, she shows a distinct preference for blue of ever shade, from sky and turquoise through periwinkle and saxe to the navy, that seems likely to hold the forefront of the mode this year.

There is much beading on her evening gowns, and she often enhances them with shoulder capes. Some of them are two piece, and she is fond of a wide ceinture both for day and evening gowns that is laced at the side with a band of the material finished with tassels.

The evening ensemble is a factor of importance nowadays. Jeanne Lanvin equips it with a coat and gives it wide sleeves covered with iridescent embroidery that gives the effect of dragonfly wings.

EXPOSITION OF PROCESSING TECHNOLOGY

Cleveland, May 10.—(UP.)—

A man of peace talking about war, and a man of war discussing peace, in connection with the chemical industry was to be the seemingly contradictory feature of the Exposition of Processing Technology which opened under the Association of Chemical Equipment Manufacturers here today.

Newton D. Baker, now a peaceable lawyer, though formerly he was secretary of war in the Wilson cabinet, is to talk on the uses of chemistry in warfare, while Major General Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service, is to discuss chemistry and peace.

The meetings are being held in Public Hall here, and are in conjunction with meetings of the Associated Technical Societies of Cleveland. The meetings will continue through Saturday.

AND THAT OTHER HOUR TO BUSINESS

I believe in taking good care of myself. I believe that health is our most precious possession. I believe that my body is entitled to a square deal. I believe all the advertisements. Every morning I do calisthenics for half an hour, followed by a cold bath and an alcohol rub. I brush my teeth for five minutes by the clock, and massage my scalp for ten. I brush in my shaving lather for the prescribed three minutes, and apply a healing lotion afterward. I use two sprays and three gargles for protection against colds, pyorrhea, and what your severest critic won't tell you. I take ample time for my breakfast, and indeed for all meals, chewing each mouthful fifty times. Following breakfast I relax for a short period, during which I read the morning paper by a good light. I always walk the two miles to and from my office.

I let no day pass without outdoor recreation of some kind—skating, skiing, golf, swimming, or tennis, according to the season. My evenings are devoted to mental and social recreation, and especially to keeping up with all the latest discoveries of modern hygienic experts. But under no circumstances do I fail to get nine full hours of sleep.

The remaining hour of each day I devote to business. — Richard L. Greene in Life.

Personality In
Serving Shown
By the Hostess

Garnishing a Dish Is
Art Creation

Expression of individuality is not confined to a woman's dress or manners. It is indicated every day in the dishes she serves on her table. The cook is like the painter or the sculptor in that she lends something of her own personality to her work.

And this is particularly true in the preparation of Bavarian creams.
Here, indeed, is an opportunity for the housewife to display her artistic ability either in the manipulation of flavors, in garnishing the dish or in the choosing of unique moulds.

Many housewives prefer to follow general recipes for the making of Bavarians and then add little touches here and there of their own choosing.
The following recipes were prepared with this idea in view.

Banana Bavarians
1 1/2 tsp. gelatin 1/4 tsp. salt
1 cup cold water 1/2 cup orange juice
1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup evaporated
milk
1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with
1 cup boiling water 1/2 cup whipping
cream
1 tsp. butter 3 bananas
Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes, add gelatin with the sugar to the hot diluted milk, and stir until dissolved. Set dish in pan of ice water, add orange juice, butter and bananas mashed to a pulp, stir occasionally. In the meantime have combined the evaporated milk and cream. Chill and whip. Fold into the gelatin mixture just as it begins to thicken. Pour into molds and chill for at least two hours.

Burnt Almond Bavarian
1 1/2 tsp. gelatin 1/4 tsp. salt
1 cup cold water 1/2 cup evaporated
milk
1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup whipping
cream
1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with
1 cup boiling water 1 cup blanched
almonds, browned
Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Caramelize the sugar by sifting it into a hot frying pan. Constantly shaking to prevent burning.
Add diluted milk to caramel and set back of stove until caramel is dissolved. Add salt and gelatin to milkcaramel mixture and set in a pan of water to thicken. Combine chill and whip the evaporated milk and cream. Pound the browned almonds when the gelatin mixture begins to set, fold in the whipped cream and nuts.

Orange Bavarian
1 1/2 tsp. gelatin 1/4 tsp. salt
1 cup cold water 1/2 cup evaporated
milk
1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup whipping
cream
1/2 cup orange juice
Soak gelatin in cold water, add sugar and orange juice and heat over hot water until gelatin dissolves.
Remove from heat, add salt and lemon juice. Cool in a pan of cold water stirring occasionally until mixture begins to thicken. Combine evaporated milk and cream, chill and whip. Fold into gelatin mixture.

Frog Farm on Large Scale

One of the largest frog farms in the country is under construction near Denton, Texas. Several dams are being built and a low, swampy region already plentiful with frogs, is being further stocked. The frogs will be raised for Texas and other markets. One of the preliminary operations was the draining of the lakes to get rid of fish, a menace to frogs. Several miles of fence will be built around the lakes to keep out snakes, another enemy of frogs. The several lakes will be used for frogs of different ages.—Indianapolis News.

POULTRY AND HOGEXPERT COMING.

Dr. H. F. Emick, of the Research department of the George H. Lee company, Omaha, Nebraska, will speak on the Diseases of Poultry and Swine, Their Cause, Treatment and Prevention, May 18, at 2 o'clock at Cloverdell Poultry farm.

He will also conduct a Post-mortem demonstration clinic, teaching all who attend to easily recognize the common ailments of poultry and swine. This demonstration is of great value to every poultry and hog raiser, because the successful treatment of any trouble depends upon an accurate diagnosis and prompt action. Thousands of dollars are lost by farmers every year because of their inability to recognize trouble until it is well started when, if taken in time, loss could have been prevented. Hear this expert and be prepared. You may not be having any losses now, but the time will surely come when the information gained will pay big dividends.

Everyone who has been losing any chickens or pigs, or who has chickens or pigs that are not doing well, is urged to bring a specimen or two for examination and receive free instructions on the treatment, cause and prevention of the trouble. Urge your neighbor to do likewise. The more specimens brought in, the better the demonstration will be. There will be no admission charge, and no one will be solicited to buy anything, inasmuch as this meeting will be held purely for educational purposes with regard to the prevention of disease among poultry and swine. Come! and bring your poultry and pig troubles with you.

WHY CIRCUS OF RINGLING IS BIGGEST

One Hundred Double Length Cars to Handle This Gigantic Enterprise.

A circus so big that it requires two added rings, eight stages, a wider hippodrome track and a 700-foot long big top to display its marvels is now headed this way. It is the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined shows, to give performances at Columbus, May 27.

The five rings now used have been made necessary to present the added attractions got together in the spring to celebrate the combined shows first appearance in New York's New Madison Square Garden. This edifice is the biggest ever built for circus purposes. To fittingly dedicate it the Ringling Brothers themselves spent several months in Europe mobilizing the biggest circus in history. This same show that for weeks entertained New York's millions is now on tour under canvas.

The tournament is as brilliant as in the past but has been enlarged by the addition of such novelties as zebras and llamas broken to harness and hitched to gem-studded floats. Wee baby elephants ride at the tops of allegorical cars. The menagerie of more than a thousand animals embraces thirteen elephant youngsters with the smallest stationed side by side with the biggest pachyderms in captivity. Another importation is the largest and handsomest tiger of which there is record.

Performing horse acts are now presented in quintet—a troupe in each of the five rings. Those elephants who are performers appear in similar formation—five herds at one time. The number of men and women aerialists, bareback riders, gymnasts and high-wire performers has been increased to eight hundred. There are three hundred and fifty trained horses two hundred of which appear in a single display. One hundred double length cars are required to handle this gigantic amusement enterprise.

Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers was ridiculing the proposed campaign to abolish short skirts.

Low-Growing Fruits Require Protection

Burning Oil in Heaters Has Proven Satisfactory.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Burning fuel oil in hard pall heaters has proved a successful method of obtaining a rise in temperature on the cranberry bogs near the mouth of the Columbia river in Washington. Local weather bureau officials assisted in making a test of the efficiency of these heaters for the purpose. The flooding of the bogs for frost protection as is done in Wisconsin and the Atlantic coast cranberry sections is not practicable in Washington.

The heaters are set on metal tripods forced several inches into the ground so that the strong winds which sometimes blow in this district cannot overturn them. Forty ten-quart hard pall heaters were used on a half-acre plot. They were equipped one night with "soot-arresters" or "spiders," and used one night without them.

The frost on the two nights of the test caused about 15 per cent damage in a check plot 300 feet distant, not equipped with heaters. There was no damage in the test plot. Both plots were similarly situated with regard to topography and atmospheric conditions. The fuel oil burned cost 6 cents a gallon in barrel lots, and the cost of the heating was 90 cents an acre per hour with the soot-arresters in place. Without them the cost was $3 per acre per hour.

It is believed by the weather bureau men who made the test that similar good results can be secured in protecting other low-growing crops, such as strawberries, tomatoes and potatoes.

Tomato Wilts Prevented With Resistant Strains

The wilts of tomatoes, of which three forms are known, are caused by moldlike fungi or by bacteria which live in the soil and infect the plants through their roots. Wilting and yellowing leaves indicate the presence of these diseases.

Fusarium wilt, the form most widely distributed, causes the plants to wilt and die slowly, while bacterial wilt is frequently more prompt in its action. Efforts should be directed to the prevention rather than to the cure of these diseases. The planting of wilt resistant strains or varieties is advisable in order to control the Fusarium wilt. A variety of tomato known as Norton is highly resistant to Fusarium and well adapted to sections where the disease is prevalent.

Fusarium wilt should not be confused with another tomato disease prevalent in Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions and variously known as blight, western blight and western yellow blight. This disease and Fusarium wilt frequently occur in the same fields. The Norton tomato is resistant to the Fusarium wilt but varieties markedly resistant to western yellow blight have not yet been developed.

Spraying or Dusting to Control Harmful Worms

The tomato fruitworm, also known as the bollworm (not boll weevil) of cotton and the corn earworm, causes heavy losses of early tomatoes in the Southern states by eating into the fruit and destroying its market value, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

A large amount of damage can be prevented by either spraying or dusting the tomato fruits with an arsenical. If a spray is desirable, use two pounds of lead arsenate to fifty gallons of water or bordeaux mixture. The dust should be used at the rate of one pound of lead arsenate to five pounds of hydrated lime or one pound of paris green to twenty pounds of hydrated lime. Calcium arsenate can be used at the rate of one pound to five pounds of hydrated lime. The first spraying or dusting should be applied when the earliest tomato fruits are beginning to form or when the first worm damage is noticed and the arsenical applications should be repeated at weekly intervals for about seven weeks. All sprayed fruit should be thoroughly wiped before it is marketed or consumed.

Windbreaks to Protect the Crops and Orchard

That windbreaks are, as a whole, an asset, particularly in regions with little rainfall and where strong, drying winds are frequent, is shown by studies made by the United States Department of Agriculture. Windbreaks protect grain crops and orchards from mechanical injury by the wind, reduce evaporation of moisture from the soil, protect farm buildings from the extremes of winter and summer weather, and may also be a source of wood for farm use or sale. The ideal windbreak would have the tallest trees planted in the central rows; on either side rows of shorter trees; and outside of these, low bushes or cedars.

Strong Ewe Best Buy

The ewe to buy is the strong, healthy ewe with a straight, broad back and sound udder, sound teeth and a heavy fleece of reasonable fineness. Such an ewe when bred to a good Shropshire or Hampshire ram may be depended on to produce a good lamb. Ewes four to six years old produce the best lambs and are easier to handle, but are not worth as much money as yearlings because they are too near the end of their usefulness.

Washington's Church

The church which General Washington attended was given the name "Pohick Church" on account of its proximity to Pohick Run. This was probably so named because of the many hickory trees growing there. Pawohickora, a food of the Algonquian Indians of Virginia, was made of the pounded nut kernels and water. The name was transferred by the whites to the tree bearing the nuts, and was shortened to pohickery and finally to hickory.

AMUSEMENTS

THE AMERICAN FARMERS ARE PROGRESSIVE

"Irish Luck" the picture Thomas Meighan went to Ireland to make opened a two days run at the Met theater yesterday. The story, directed for the screen by Victor Heerman, was adapted by Tom Geraghty from Norman Venner's Saturday evening Post serial, "An Imperfect Imposter." Lois Wilson is featured at the head of the cast.

Meighan, as Tom Donahue, directs traffic on Fifth avenue at Fifty-ninth street, New York City, little dreaming that a few weeks would see him with his hands full of adventure in foreign lands. But that's just what happens when he wins a newspaper popularity contest and goes to Ireland.

From the moment he puts his foot on "the old sod" the action starts—a band of conspirators, who plan to do a pretty girl and her brother, a young nobleman, out of their lawful inheritance, are involved. And when the plot is all rounded up in jail where they belong, Tom sails for home again. Instead of an armful of shamrocks to convince the boys of his precinct that he has really been to Ireland, Tom Donahue takes back—a bride—which makes him the brother-in-law of an earl.

Meighan is Irish. The title of this picture is Irish. Tom has never before been seen in an Irish story, but it's sure bet that, after seeing "Irish Luck," you'll be hollering for more like this one. It's the finest thing Tom Meighan's ever done. And that's something.

Mother Nature Equips

Birds With Snowshoes

Like hens, partridges are scratchers. They are inhabitants of our northern temperate region. In the winter their toes become equipped with a fringe of strong horny points which act as snowshoes.

If we examine the feet of one of the little shore birds we shall find their toes also edged with a thin fleshy membrane, which becomes a slight web between the bases of the toes.

The hind toes of the scratchers, shore birds and of many others are more or less elevated and abbreviated. The black-billed plover has four toes. All other plovers are three-toed, having no hind toe. Coots and grebes have the membrane along the toes in the form of lobes, so that we speak of them as having lobated toes.

Gulls, terns, loons, auks, petrels and their relatives have webs filling completely the spaces between the three front toes. Gannets, cormorants, pelicans and frigate birds have all four toes webbed. Webbed or partially webbed toes means equipment for soft walking or swimming. All those with fully webbed toes swim and most of them may be found on soft, sandy beaches.

Pioneer Voyager

A Little Band of Huguenots at Port Royal built a pinnace in 1562, in which they returned to France in the winter of 1562-3. This is thought to be the first American-built ship to cross the ocean.

MORE THAN HALF ARE FORDS.

The County Clerk's record of bills of sale filed by Pickaway county owners of new automobiles and trucks show that for the month of April, 1926 thirty-two were Fords and thirty were cars of other makes.

The new cars other than Fords were as follows: nine Dodge cars, six Chevrolets, five Buicks, three Studebakers, three Overlands, two Chryslers, one Essex and one Jewett.

Beside the cars shown above, Pickaway county dealers sold twenty-two cars that were delivered to points outside of this county but the bills of sale for which were filed here.

Typical American Menu of Meat, White Bread, Potatoes and Beans Fails to Give "Pep" Elements

Addition of Leafy Vegetables to Regular Daily Fare Does Wonders.

Improper winter dieting is responsible for that languid, all-in feeling called spring fever, according to the investigations of nutrition experts. They point out that the typical American diet of bread, meat, potatoes and beans does not supply the necessary food elements to keep the body in good physical condition.

The problem the housewife has to solve for her family is: what foods shall I serve to correct this condition? The bread, meat, potato and bean diet does not supply the necessary dietary essentials known as vitamins; neither does it give a sufficiency of minerals.

Addition, however, of spring vegetables to the regular diet does wonders, for leafy vegetables are rich in both elements. The anemic individual acquires color and his complexion clears when he begins to eat vegetables, for the reason that he is supplied with the various minerals he needs. His heart action improves because the vegetables supply calcium, sodium and potassium; his constipation is corrected because vegetables contain cellulose; his skin troubles clear because his blood is put in neutral condition; his appetite is sharpened and he feels "peppy" because he has received his quota of vitamins. The following recipes for spring vegetable dishes are recommended as an aid in correcting the deficient diets of winter:

- Spring Fever.
- Stuffed Lamb Chops. Mint Jelly
- Pea Roast with Carrot Sauce
- New Potatoes
- Cucumber-Radish Salad
- Butter Rolls
- Strawberry Short Cake
- Coffee
- Stuffed Lamb Chops.
- Lamb chops. Chicken livers
- Salt or
- Pepper. Fresh mushrooms
- Have rib or loin chops cut in 2-inch pieces. Remove bone and outer skin. In rib chop make a slit and insert either a mushroom or a chicken liver near the long end. Draw end of chop around into a round, flat piece, and fasten with coarse thread. Place on greased broiler under a hot flame and brown on both sides. Lower rack, let broil, turning often, 15 or 20 minutes longer. Remove string, sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with bits of butter. Remove to hot plate and serve at once.

Large French Wheat Harvest

French farmers succeeded this year in raising enough wheat to meet the whole national demand, although the area cultivated was smaller than ever before. The wheat harvest yielded 180,000,000 bushels.

ERECTIONS IN CEMETERIES MAY NOT BE MOVED

Court of Appeals Affirms Lower Tribunal in Case Against the Trustees.

The court of appeals of Madison county has just handed down its decision in the Mt. Sterling Cemetery cases. There were three of these cases. The first was brought by Mary Bennett, Sophia O'Day, Mary F. McClimans, Laura B. Heath and Pearl B. May, the widow and heirs and devisees of William Bennett, deceased; the second case was brought by Alwilda Carpenter, the sole heir at law of Mrs. Milton M. Thomas; and the third case was brought by Lida L. Owens, Frances Lindenberg and Floy L. Hicks, the heirs and devisees of Joanna Hicks, deceased. These cases were brought against Job Renick, sexton, and J. L. Bower, Frank Winfough and R. Scott Redman, trustees of Pleasant cemetery, located in two townships, Darby township, Pickaway county, and Pleasant township, Madison county.

Pleasant cemetery is a union cemetery of Darby township, Pickaway county and Pleasant township, Madison county. In the first instance when laid out it was located wholly in Darby township and was then a Township cemetery controlled solely by the trustees of Darby township. It is now controlled and managed by the trustees of the two townships, and a board of cemetery trustees.

The court granted a permanent injunction to the plaintiff lot owners restraining the defendant sexton and trustees of Pleasant cemetery from removing or interfering with certain erections consisting of a marble fence, posts and steps on the Bennett lot and a series of granite posts ornamented by chains stretched from post to post on the Thomas lot and an iron fence around the Hicks lot had been removed a few days prior to the bringing of the suit by Lida L. Owens and others and the court requires the cemetery trustees to restore that fence and enjoins them from future interference therewith.

The trustees of Darby and Pleasant townships and of Pleasant cemetery several years ago adopted certain rules and regulations by which they sought to remove all enclosures around graves and burial lots of any description whatever that had been erected in the cemetery and in the summer 1924 the above defendants undertook to enforce the same against the above mentioned three old burial lots; the Bennett lot was purchased in 1874, the Thomas lot in 1876 and the Hicks lot in 1873, and they were the only lots in the cemetery which were enclosed, the enclosures in each instance having been erected prior to 1880. The tearing down of the iron fence surrounding the Hicks lot in the summer of 1924 and threatening to tear down and remove the other two precipitated these three law suits. Judge Hornbeck, of the common pleas court also decided in favor of the plaintiffs about a year ago, and the cemetery trustees carried the case up to the court of appeals.

The court of appeals among other things in its opinion says:

"At the time of the purchase of these lots the statute did not provide for rules and regulations by the township trustees in regard to the management of cemetery associations and similar erections were at one time protected by statute. The first authority given by statute to trustees to provide rules and regulations for cemetery associations was enacted subsequent to 1880 and could not, therefore, apply to existing erections lawful at the time and not objected to by the cemetery officials when erected.

"These improvements have been kept in good repair up to the date of the bringing of this action. In the Bennett case, the original owner, William Bennett, in his will provided a fund of $300 the income from which was to be invested for the beautification and keeping in repair of the burial lot. This fund passed into the hands of the cemetery association and is now retained by them. Under these circumstances, we are of the opinion that the trustees cannot, in good conscience, hold the fund and at the same time destroy or remove the improvements placed on said lot, and to which improvements the will of William Bennett evidently applied.

"The plaintiffs in the other two cases offer to provide a similar fund for the same purpose in respect to their lots."

Charles H. May, of this city, was the attorney for the plaintiffs in the Bennett case; A. T. Cordray, of London, attorney for plaintiffs in the Carpenter case, and Charles J. Pretzman, of Columbus, attorney for plaintiffs in the Owen case. Bowman & Bowman, of Springfield, and Murray and Emery, of London, were attorneys for the defendant cemetery trustees.

OLD WOMEN RULE BLOND INDIANS

Tribe Knows as Much About Sanitation as Does White Man.

Washington.—A tribe of Indians in which tow heads, white skins and hazel eyes predominate, which knows as much of sanitation as does the white man, and in which the old women wield supreme authority, furnishes the material for an interesting publication soon to be released by the Smithsonian Institution. The tribe is the San Blas Indians of Panama, a branch of the Cunas. Herbert W. Krieger, curator of ethnology of the United States National museum, under direction of the Smithsonian Institution, describes them in Museum Bulletin 136, bearing the title, "Material Culture of the People of South-eastern Panama."

Are these white Indians really Indians? Early investigators found it difficult to admit the paradox. Some suggested that the San Blas group were the descendants of an isolated Nordic or Viking strain. Others even went so far as to see in them the children of one of the ten "lost tribes" of Israel. But these romantic hypotheses have had to be discarded. Physical tests and measurements made by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, Smithsonian anthropologist, and others, leave no doubt that the San Blas Indians are pure bloods, resembling in detail of physical characteristics the famous Maya Indians of Yucatan, and forming possibly a connecting link with the equally advanced ancient Peruvians.

Origin in Doubt.

While students of anthropology and genetics have not yet come to a decision as to the origin of the blondness of these white San Blas Indians, they are pretty well convinced that it is a form of albinism. Albinos occur among practically all Indian races, and while the San Blas whites have not the characteristic pink eyes, some of the youths squint in the light. The determination of just what part heredity and environment may have played in fixing these unusual tendencies offers a problem of first importance.

Almost equally astonishing with their blondness is the fact that the San Blas Indians have remained pure bloods and resisted adulteration with invaders, Indian, negro or European. They have had to fight for this isolation and they still maintain in every one of their villages a special corps of police whose duty it is to warn of the approach of strangers and if necessary to drive them away. Racial pride has kept them free from intermarriage with other tribes.

It is natural to expect that so independent a race would have developed a high state of culture. "Some of the remarkable features of their civilization," Mr. Krieger writes, "stop but little short of what we with our European culture have liked to consider peculiarly our own achievement. They have a pictographic writing system that ranks but little below our own alphabet in efficiency. Their sculpture and carving in wood represent a high standard of taste. Their painting, embroidery and applied arts, such as applique sewing, rank with similar work of European peasants. "But still more phenomenal for a so-called primitive people is their knowledge of medicine. They treat fever, for example, in the most approved modern American fashion. The patient is kept cool and absolutely quiet. They know the mosquito to be a danger to health. Consequently they build their houses on small islands off the coast far from the breeding places of the mosquitoes, or on piles raised above the water. Sanitation is superior to that of most villages in the United States. The water supply is always brought from a distant spring or other undefined source."

Excellent Sailors.

Mr. Krieger further describes this paragon of native races as excellent sailors. "In short," he says, "the tribe constitute a monument to the virility of aboriginal North American culture when undisturbed by the intrusive alien." And the explanation which he suggests for this superiority is feminine rule. "It is the women who wield the real authority. Men may be elected to office and become chief musician, doctor, or village chief, but it is the elder women who tell the voters whom to elect. A young married man always goes to live with his mother-in-law and takes orders from her."

In contrast with the independence and virility of the Cuna Indians is the gregariousness of the Choco Indians who dwell on the Pacific side of the isthmus and are divided from the Cuna by the mountainous interior. They have intermarried so much with negroes and Asiatics that the native villages have practically disappeared. A much less cultured people than the San Blas, the Chocos yet excel in certain architectural achievements. Their spirit lodges show an excellent form of mortising and joinery, a practice not known to other South American tribes.

Peculiar to the culture of the Choco Indians, says Mr. Krieger, are their ceremonial harvest festivals, in which the chief converses with carved and painted spirits of animals and men to discover whether the season's crops will succeed or fail.

Chocolate Popular

Cocoa or cacao, the kernel or seed of a tropical tree, was introduced into England shortly after the discovery of Mexico. From the kernel is obtained chocolate, and when the fat has been pressed from chocolate the substance remaining is known as cocoa. Great quantities of chocolate are now used in many kinds of confectionery, and from cocoa is made a nutritious and refreshing beverage.

TWENTY-NINE

Defendants In National "Gin Trust" Will Go On Trial Tuesday.

Cleveland, May 10.—(UP.)—

Twenty-nine of the 111 defendants indicted in the government probe into the national "gin trust" are to be arraigned in Federal court before Judge Paul Jones here tomorrow.

Officials in charge of the probe expect that 50 per cent of those arraigned will plead guilty. Seventeen are from Cleveland, seven from Minneapolis, two from St. Paul and three from California.

Four have already pleaded guilty.

At least 60 new indictments will be returned against additional conspirators, Assistant U. S. District Attorney Miles Evans has confidentially announced. Evidence against them is now being gathered.

HARTMAN THEATER.

Under Cover.

a mystery drama by Roi Cooper Megrue, author of the well known farce, "It Pays to Advertise," has been chosen as this week's offering by the Hartman Stock company under the direction of John Hayden.

"Under Cover" enjoyed a long run when it was first produced in the Cort theater, New York, with William Courtenay in the leading role.

It has action aplenty, with thrill after thrill until the final curtain. Primarily the story has to do with the U. S. custom officers attempt to run down certain expert diamond smugglers. Amy Cartwright has foolishly sold her sister Ethel's diamonds to satisfy a gambling debt, and has collected their value from a burglary insurance company. With this information in his power, Daniel Taylor, a deputy in the customs, force the refined and innocent Ethel, against her inclination, to enter the custom service as a spy to "get the goods" on Steven Denby, a young society man whom she has met in Paris and fallen in love with, but who in reality has smuggled a valuable pearl necklace on his recent return from Europe.

The plot from then on has many astonishing twists and turns and it is not until the final curtain that the denouement comes and the entire plot unravels. Steven Denby is to be played by the popular leading man, Donn Cook, and his performance of this role promises to be a real delight. Jean Ford will play the part of Ethel, and others of the company will be in the supporting cast. "Under Cover" looks like a real thriller. Don't miss it!

Don't forget that dancing in the foyer to Allen Hale's orchestra starts thirty minutes before the play, during intermission and after each matinee, plays thirty minutes longer.

Matinees Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

NEWEST THINGS IN THE ARTS

(By Margaret Krumm.)

Cleveland, May 10.—(UP.)—

Bigger and better than ever is the annual exhibition of Cleveland artists, which opened last week at the Cleveland Museum of Art.

Moderns and classics, Neo-art and old-time art mingle in the exhibition. Shively's pieces of realism are among the most intriguing. They are patterned after the journalistic modernistic trend in literature. They look like a portrait of a "dirty back yard." They are Sandburgian in their stark, naked reality.

H. G. Keller's five schapes, water and oil, are among the most interesting and vivid.

With a taste for things worthwhile, which we had not credited to the Ohio metropolis, we learn that Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" is one of the books most in demand at the Cleveland Public Library. The story of Clyde Griffiths, once it gets started, and particularly in the second volume (for it takes Dreiser two full books to tell his tale) is gripping, and once having read it one feels as though a hard day's golf had been followed by 10 sets of tennis and a 20 mile run. It takes such a hold of the reader that it is physically exhausting.

Robert McLaughlin's annual summer stock season got under way at the Ohio Theatre here today with "The Family Upstairs" as the opening number. As usual, McLaughlin plans to try out embryo plays to see how they look before they strike Broadway.

Value of Liming in Improvement of Soil

Productivity Greatly Increased by Application.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The productivity of many soils can be greatly increased by the application of lime. Lime acts various ways; it helps to break down organic matter, it corrects acidity, and it improves the physical condition of the soil. By hastening decomposition of the organic matter, lime helps to make such matter available as plant food for whatever crops may be grown. Lime should not be applied to soils deficient in organic matter, however, especially in warm humid climates, without taking steps to maintain or increase the supply of this essential ingredient, as otherwise the outcome will be a decline in yields. The best way to increase the amount of organic matter in the soil is to apply manure or turn under green crops, such as crimson clover, cowpeas, soy beans, red clover, and hairy vetch. On some low-yielding land the turning under of a good growth of crimson clover has doubled the yield of the succeeding crop.

Lime is frequently used to correct acidity, a condition widely found in the eastern part of the United States, and detrimental to the growth of certain crops.

Another result accomplished by liming is an improvement in the physical condition of the soil. Soils of a compact nature are rendered more permeable, in consequence of which they become more retentive of moisture, less likely to wash, and more friable. Sandy soils also are benefited, being made more retentive of moisture. Application of lime is particularly beneficial in the case of leguminous crops, such as clover and alfalfa. Liming may also increase the availability of other minerals, such as potash, by rendering them more soluble.

Detailed information relative to liming soils may be obtained from state agricultural colleges or the United States Department of Agriculture.

OLENTANGY A. C.

Defeated Circleville Eagles Sunday Afternoon In One-sided Game.

The Circleville Eagles were disastrously defeated yesterday by a score of 14 to 1 at the hands of the Olentangy A. C. While it was a terribly one-sided contest it was rather interesting, inasmuch as it was a slugfest on the visitors' part.

Five pitchers were used by the locals in an effort to stem the tide. Rector started and receives the credit for the loss, although most of the runs were made after he left the mound. Freck Greeno finished the game, and looked like the best of the bunch.

The Eagles were handicapped by the absence of several players whom they had depended upon. Too, they have not yet found their batting eye, and will undoubtedly offer a sterner offense as the season goes on.

Outside of the disastrous sixth inning it was a very fair contest. The crowd was a good natured one and they enjoyed the flood rather well.

Here's hoping that things look up in the future.

A NEW INTER- PRETATION OF PAUL'S LETTER

Chicago, May 10.—A new interpretation of Paul's letter to the Galatians tending to reveal a struggle in the early Christian church which menaced its foundations and which was similar in many ways to present church controversies has been given at the University of Chicago by Dean Shailer Matthews. His comment is published by the American Institute of Sacred Literature as an introduction to a modern translation of the letter by Prof. Edgar J. Goodspeed.

"Paul's indignant letter to the Galatians is the magna charta of religious liberty," Dean Matthews asserts. "It is not a theological treatise. The real subject was much more vital than the struggle between gentile Christians and Jewish Christians, who held that allegiance to the old laws was tantamount to genuine Christianity. It was really one which we face today."

"Now, as then, we have to decide whether Christians must look back to the law, or forward to Christ for spiritual guidance. Now, as then, we have to determine whether the authority of the past shall control the future."

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The members of the Young Ladies' Bible class of the Presbyterian church entertained their mothers to a banquet in kind remembrance of "Mothers' day. Covers were laid for seventy guests. The long tables in the social rooms were beautifully decorated. Hand painted cards marked the places for each guest and miniature rosebud cups with salted almonds, amidst the carnations that graced the place of every mother presented a pleasing and beautiful sight. The room was artistically decorated with baskets of white and white and orchid lilies. At the close of the dinner hour a delightful program was rendered. Mrs. W. W. Robinson gave an address of welcome and a poem by Edgar A. Guest entitled "Home." Two vocal selections by Miss Helen Marion; Miss Alice Pedrick introduced Mrs. E. S. Toensmeier, who gave a beautiful talk on "Mothers." Mrs. Harry Heffner rendered two vocal selections and Miss Margaret Clark, a reading on "Mothers of Great Men." Mrs. Clark will give a vocal solo and musical reading entitled "Robinson Crusoe." This closed the program for the evening and a social hour followed.

The committee in charge was Misses Helen Bennett, Ethel Rife, Elizabeth Roth and Mrs. Marvin Dresbach, Mrs. Orrin Dresbach and Mrs. Walter Downing. Other members of the class assisted.

Declares Crow Is Not as Black as Painted

Washington.—The crow is not as black as he is painted, in the opinion of the Department of Agriculture, and it recommends that farmers inflict the death penalty on them only in extreme cases. Sprouting corn is only one item of a varied crow menu, which includes many insects, the department states. A trap has been invented which will really catch the wary crows, the department asserts, recommending its use or the employment of warnings to the feathered pirates where they are too numerous.

The utility of the bat as a mosquito exterminator has been held by the Department of Agriculture to be rather doubtful. This flying mammal relishes mosquitoes, but the Mexican free-tailed variety, which has a potentially valuable appetite, won't colonize satisfactorily.

Some cities in the South have gone so far as to build and furnish special "bat-bellies" as an inducement for them to settle down and enter the mosquito exterminating industry, but the free apartments persistently remain vacant.

Effect of Coffee Drinking

Coffee owes its well-known stimulating action to the presence of the alkaloid caffeine. This substance has a diuretic action upon the kidneys and raises blood pressure. This influence upon blood pressure is probably the reason sleepiness may be prevented by partaking of coffee. Muscular energy is augmented and the sense of fatigue dissipated by the use of this stimulant.

Saved Rock Paintings

When a consignment of rock arrived at London from Rhodesia some time ago it was found to be covered with a thick growth of lichens. Hidden underneath were rock paintings dating back probably to the Stone Age. To scrape off the plants with a knife would have been disastrous. Someone suggested smearing the lichens with ammonia, which peeled them off easily.

REDUCTION IN POSTAL RATES ORDERED

BY CONGRESSIONAL GROUP CHANGES IN FIVE CLASSES

Under Consideration--Reduction in the Rate of Private Mailing Cards From Two Cents to One Cent--Newspapers Mailed by Individuals to Be One Cent, Parcel Post Packages Rate Will Be Considerably Reduced--Action On Second Class Matter Postponed.

Material changes in five classes of temporary postal rates approved last year were agreed upon Monday by the special joint congressional committee. They are:

Reduction in the rate on private mailing cards from two cents to one cent.

Reduction of the rate on transient second-class mail matter--newspapers mailed by individuals--to 1 cent.

Establishment of a rate of not more than 2 cents on return postal cards sent out by business firms, with the collection to be made after their return.

Rearrangement of the special handling rate on parcel post packages so that in place of the standard 25 cent charge there will be a graduation with a 15 cent rate for packages weighing not over two pounds; 25 cents for packages weighing from two to 10 pounds and 35 cents for packages over 10 pounds.

A penalty of one cent for each ounce on mail matter on which postage is short paid more than one rate.

While concurring in these changes, Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, disagreed with the majority on several points, proposing a restoration of the 1920 rate on newspapers and other publications with a 50 cent bundle charge rate; reduction of the rate on third class matter from 1½ cents to 1 cent for each two ounces, and abolition of the 2 cent special charge on fourth class mail.

The majority report will be made simultaneously to the senate and house. The latter will act first under the agreement and members of the committee hope to get the majority changes thru at this session, so that the commission can proceed with a study of other rate structures with a view to recommending amendments.

Declaring that it recognized the force of the arguments regarding a return to 1920 second-class rates, the majority said that when statistics for a full year were in it might be possible to "provide" some amelioration of the conditions of which the publishers of newspapers and periodicals now complain.

The majority said it also had in mind the establishment with the third-class mail of subdivisions whereby the larger users of this class of mail could have the benefit of the pound rate, somewhat as granted the users of second-class mail.

"The committee is of the general opinion that the entire structure of fourth-class (parcel post) should be recast," the report said, adding that the committee might ultimately determine that the postmaster general should deal with this class of mail under the authority given him to apply for rates thru the interstate commerce commission.

Hawaiian Girl of 7 Saves 2 From Sea

Hilo, T. H.—Violet Kauka, seven years of age, Hawaiian girl, has been hailed here as a community heroine following the rescue of her younger sister and a playmate who had drifted out to sea in a rowboat.

The two children were playing in the boat and did not notice that it started to drift away from shore. The servant girl in a neighboring beach residence first saw the predicament and started for help. In the meantime the Hawaiian youngster stripped off her clothing and plunged in for the rescue. She successfully negotiated the quarter-mile swim, seized the rope, and towed the children to safety.

Violet learned to swim at the age of five.

Where Gold Was Discovered in New California Field

Lured by the magic word "gold," scores of persons arrive at Kramer, Cal., daily and begin trudging across the desert country, carrying stakes and location notices. Mining engineers and the Herkelrath brothers, whose strike recently stirred the desert into a veritable stampede, are said to have declared their "high grade" will run $3,000 a ton or more. This picture shows a crowd of mining engineers and prospectors at the shaft where gold was first discovered waiting for a bucket of gold ore to be brought to the surface. MAN SHOOT SUCCESSOR KILLS SELF

Jealousy in Business Was the Motive For Crime of Charles J. Dalton.

Cincinnati, O., May 11, (UP)—For ten minutes Charles A. Dalton listened to arguments why he should not shoot his successor as president of the Dalton Adding Machine company.

Then he picked up a pistol and shot him.

The fifth shot from his pistol pierced his own heart and killed him instantly.

His victim, Harry Landsiedel, is in a serious condition today.

The tragedy was described by H. C. Grubbs, vice president, who was forced to sit helplessly and await the shooting.

"Landsiedel came to the door and called me into his office about ten minutes of four," Grubbs said today.

"As I entered I saw Dalton was standing on the other side of the room. He told me briefly to shut the door. I did and sat down.

"Dalton sat down too, a good six feet from both of us, unwrapped a bundle he carried and produced a pistol.

"He laid it on a corner of the desk. 'I'm going to shoot Landsiedel,' he said, 'and then kill myself.'

"I've been thinking over this a long time. I'm practically out of this business that my father founded. There is no use in arguing."

"For ten minutes I pointed out the consequences of his act, the disgrace, the grief of his and Landsiedel's families."

"Landsiedel secretly pressed a button for his stenographer hoping she would understand the situation and call police. She didn't.

"While I was in the midst of a sentence Dalton abruptly picked up the gun. 'That's enough' he said, and fired at Landsiedel.

"I leaped toward him and he thrust the gun at me. I leaped behind a door, ran for police. Behind me four shots rang out.

"When we got back, Landsiedel was slumped down in his chair. Dalton was lying on the floor dead."

Landsiedel was shot twice, once in the knee and thru the right lung.

First White-Collar Stowaway Hails Home

New York.—It was a handsome Scottish scarf that won Royal Pichon away from the security and comfort of land about two months ago, but all the woolens from Scotland couldn't coax him back to the waves again. Pichon, who is twenty-five, grew up in New Orleans as a bellhop and then a clerk in hotels. Working in New Orleans, he saw a sailor with the Scottish scarf that invited him away to sea. Working his way across on a freighter, he soon found himself broke in London. Selling his $65 overcoat for two shillings and a worn-out jacket, he hid under the boilers of a liner.

He had four bananas and three rolls for his two shillings. These kept him alive for the two days before he was discovered. He turned his one suit of clothes inside out while he was hidden so that when he landed here he might be presentable.

He was presentable when he was unlocked yesterday, the first white-collar stowaway discovered. "Go to sea again? If I ever go to New Orleans, I'll die there. European liquor isn't what it's cracked up to be."

Variety in Chic Spring Wardrobe

New Mode Expands to Meet Diversified Needs of Modern Woman.

Beginning with the silhouette and the chapeau and continuing to such an inconsiderable accessory as the purse, there is a lack of unanimity on practically every separate item of the new spring mode, asserts a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune. You cannot dispute a lady who tells you that spring skirts must be long—at least to temperize with her and she will point to Poiret as her authority. Advise some one that the proper hat to wear for the new season will have a narrow brim, and in a moment you will hear the name of some authority who prefers the grande dame type. And so it goes. One designer makes his waistline high, one normal, another low. One makes his silhouette flare, another's is straight, a third is kinetic.

It is interesting enough to contemplate, but the time for decision is at hand. We shall not attempt in this article to suggest what silhouette or waistline to choose for your new spring acquisitions. Instead, we shall attempt to translate the mood of fashion as it should be applied to the various components of the wardrobe. The fundamental struggle, if there be any, is between mannishness and girlishness, and for the moment each has its place—and each, as well, is de trop in the other's province.

Less Masculine.

The popular Worth model is less masculine than the extreme atrocities that were affected a year ago, but clearly it belongs to the masculine genre. Under what circumstances is this costume smart? Clearly for the morning or afternoon stroll, the shopping expedition, the spectator's role at golf links or tennis courts or similar occasions. But keep it away from the dais, no matter what the temptation.

The Poiret evening gown is at the other end of the gamut. In it you have the contemporary absolute in femininity. The gentle natter blue chiffon, the ingenious silver embroidery, the bolero effect and the semi-bouffant silhouette are all represented. And the quaintly youthful longer skirt is the final touch of real girlishness. Not the merest hint of mannishness lurks about the costume—it would have been considered charmingly feminine even in those genteel prewar days.

We need go no further. What clearly appears is that for formal occasions lady is quite as deliciously feminine as her Victorian forbears, while for the rest of her infinite variety she becomes as informal, severe or sports-like, as the occasion demands.

There is no question of haphazard duality of tendencies. There is no deathless struggle between two hopelessly divergent types of dress. The modern woman is no creature of volatile moods who must always be one type or another. And the jeune fille will not develop into a concave man.

Scallops and the Combination of Rose and Black Feature Ensemble.

nish species merely because, when indulging in the recreations of her brother, she chooses to dress as sensibly.

It is simply that lady has added to her interests. Instead of being a cloistered bit of femininity all day, dressed in all the frills and furbelows of the late Victorian, she has become a sportswoman, a business woman and a clubwoman as well. And for each of these modern diversions naturally enough she requires a different type of dress. That is all that Patou means when he refers to duality of tendencies, and you need not let it worry you for an instant. The Paris collections must defer to every mood of the modern woman—they therefore include the various types of dress which are essential to each mood, and that is the why and wherefore of the dual mode, which is not really dual but has merely expanded to meet the increased demands of the modern woman.

Gowns for Every Occasion.

For spring Jeanne Lanvin has designed gowns that are suitable for every occasion and for every climate. The most elegant of these with a wide variety of pursuits will find within her doors simple little suits for golf or yachting, smart ensembles, exquisite gowns for calling or bridge, languorous tea gowns of richest embroidery and garden party frocks of simplest organdie that are a marvel of handwork, and perhaps better than anywhere else, lovely period gowns that are a delight to wear in the gracious setting of some rare old country house or historic castle.

This season's outstanding note, as far as everyday clothes are concerned, is the circular-cut skirt in the three or four piece ensemble. Jumper, skirt, short jacket and long or three-quarter length overcoat is the most popular interpretation. A light coat and skirt with a dark blouse or a blouse trimmed with dark material is a novel feature. There is a tendency also to introduce variety into the ensemble, making the coat or one item of the whole in a different color and material, yet giving a subtle sense of belonging to the same set.

Kasha, as usual, plays a large and important part in the Lanvin models. There is an apricot kasha coat worn over a navy blue skirt with a navy jumper spotted with white. A beige kasha coat embroidered with a large white motif, characteristically Lanvin, is worn over a black taffeta dress. A canary yellow alpaca coat with black and white-striped silk facings is worn over a white shantung dress. This season the Lanvin motif is placed on the right sleeve, on the large draped revers of a coat or dress or on the back of the coat. There are many other clever little individual touches, such as a tiny scarlet bow threaded through one revers of a navy coat frock with box plaits of navy and white polka dot and a scarlet leather belt. Another amusing finish is a narrow red cravette that appears under the collar of a beige suit at the back, forming a cross between the shoulders that is held in place with a red button in the center.

Lanvin uses buttons as a trimming, but she employs them with discretion. Wool embroidery is another form of decoration which she favors. Her new design for this season is a kind of overlapping shell-shaped scallop in shaded silks or wools which she uses on dresses and coats as well as jumpers.

Applied Panthers.

Wide, flat bias tucks are another form of decoration which has appealed to Mme. Lanvin this season. She uses these most effectively in three shades of geranium red to adorn the cross-over corsage and edge the wide sleeves of a black alpaca gown.

Animals and other fantastic designs appear on the large patch pockets of sports overcoats. There is one in navy blue leather with a wild boar in silver on the pocket. It is worn over a delightful little jumper dress in light apricot jersey cloth. Another in heavy brown leather has panthers appliqued in the pockets.

Taffeta is used both for the gowns that are suitable for everyday town wear and also for the exquisite picture costumes which this time hovers between the periods of 1827 and 1840.

Though Lanvin uses every possible color under the sun, she shows a distinct preference for blue of ever-hade, from sky and turquoise through pavenche and saxe to the navy, that seems likely to hold the forefront of the mode this year.

There is much beading on her evening gowns, and she often enhances them with shoulder capes. Some of them are two piece, and she is fond of a wide belt both for day and evening gowns that is laced at the side with a band of the material finished with tassels.

The evening ensemble is a factor of importance nowadays. Jeanne Lanvin equips it with a coat and gives it wide sleeves covered with iridescent embroidery that gives the effect of dragonfly wings.

EXPOSITION OF PROCESSING TECHNOLOGY

Cleveland, May 10.—(UP).—A man of peace talking about war, and a man of war discussing peace, in connection with the chemical industry was to be the seemingly contradictory feature of the Exposition of Processing Technology which opened under the Association of Chemical Equipment Manufacturers here today.

Newton D. Baker, now a peaceable lawyer, though formerly he was secretary of war in the Wilson cabinet, is to talk on the uses of chemistry in warfare, while Major General Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service, is to discuss chemistry and peace.

The meetings are being held in Public Hall here, and are in conjunction with meetings of the Associated Technical Societies of Cleveland. The meetings will continue through Saturday.

AND THAT OTHER HOUR TO BUSINESS

I believe in taking good care of myself. I believe that health is our most precious possession. I believe that my body is entitled to a square deal. I believe all the advertisements. Every morning I do calisthenics for half an hour, followed by a cold bath and an alcohol rub. I brush my teeth for five minutes by the clock, and massage my scalp for ten. I brush in my shaving lather for the prescribed three minutes, and apply a healing lotion afterward. I use two sprays and three gargles for protection against colds, pyorrhea, and what your severest critic won't tell you. I take ample time for my breakfast, and indeed for all meals, chewing each mouthful fifty times. Following breakfast I relax for a short period, during which I read the morning paper by a good light. I always walk the two miles to and from my office.

I let no day pass without outdoor recreation of some kind—skating, skiing, golf, swimming, or tennis, according to the season. My evenings are devoted to mental and social recreation, and especially to keeping up with all the latest discoveries of modern hygienic experts. But under no circumstances do I fail to get nine full hours of sleep.

The remaining hour of each day I devote to business. — Richard L. Greene in Life.

Ingratitude

He is ungrateful who denies that he has received a kindness which has been bestowed upon him; he is ungrateful who conceals it; he is ungrateful who makes no return for it; most ungrateful of all is he who forgets it.—Seneca.

SPLENDID JEWELS
IN ROYAL REGALIA

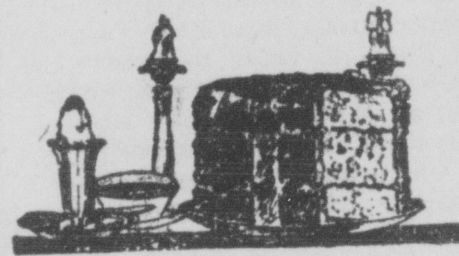

These are the principal English crown jewels: King Edward's crown was made for the coronation of Charles II in 1662 by Sir Robert Vyner. The Imperial state crown was made for Queen Victoria in 1838 by Rundell and Bridge. The Imperial crown of India was made by Garrard for the coronation of King George V as emperor of India at Delhi in 1912. The queen's ivory rod, the crown of Queen Mary, the diadem of Queen Mary of Modena, the queen's scepter with the cross were all made for Mary of Modena, the consort of James II, in 1685. The state crown of Mary was made for the coronation of Queen Mary in 1911. The king's royal scepter and the king's scepter, with the dove, were made for Charles II in 1660. The queen's scepter, with the dove, was made for Mary II in 1689. The king's orb was made for Charles II in 1662. The queen's orb was made during the reign of William and Mary. The ampulla was made for the coronation of Henry IV in 1399. The spoon is attributed to the Twelfth or Thirteenth century. The sword of state was made for George IV. The spurs and Queen Elizabeth's salt cellar were made for Charles II. The first record of the bracelets was found during the time of Mary of Modena.

Real Attraction

We were talking with a friend who has just come back from a trip across the pond. (Note: One goes "across to Europe," but one returns from "across the pond.") He had a wonderful time, of course, but what do you suppose impressed him most? St. Peter's in Rome, or St. Mark's in Venice? Monte Carlo or Versailles? Notre Dame, Pompeii or the quaint streets of London? Wrong. It was a little brunette from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, he met in Naples.—Ottawa Herald.

Passed Wrong Refreshments

A high-powered salesman was explaining to Frank Wilson how he figured out prospects. "By taking one look at a man I can size him up," he said. He went on to explain that he carried two kinds of cigars—stogies and two-for-a-quarter. While he was talking he handed Frank an Old Virginia cheroot. Then he was told a few things.—Capper's Weekly.

Personality In
Serving Shown
By the Hostess

Garnishing a Dish Is
Art Creation

Expression of individuality is not confined to a woman's dress or manners. It is indicated every day in the dishes she serves on her table. The cook is like the painter or the sculptor in that she lends something of her own personality to her work.

And this is particularly true in the preparation of Bavarian creams. Here, indeed, is an opportunity for the housewife to display her artistic ability either in the manipulation of flavors, in garnishing the dish or in the choosing of unique moulds.

Many housewives prefer to follow general recipes for the making of Bavarians and then add little touches here and there of their own choosing. The following recipes were prepared with this idea in view.

- Banana Bavarians
- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1 1/2 tsp. gelatin | 1/4 tsp. salt |
| 1 cup cold water | 1/2 cup orange juice |
| 1/2 cup sugar | 1/2 cup evaporated milk |
| 1/2 cup evaporated milk | 1/2 cup whipping cream |
| 1 cup boiling water | 3 bananas |
| 1 tsp. butter | |

Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes, add gelatin with the sugar to the hot diluted milk, and stir until dissolved. Set dish in pan of ice water, add orange juice, butter and bananas mashed to a pulp, stir occasionally. In the meantime have combined the evaporated milk and cream. Chill and whip. Fold into the gelatin mixture just as it begins to thicken. Pour into molds and chill for at least two hours.

- Ezrunt Almond Bavarian
- | | |
|-------------------------|---------------------------------|
| 1 1/2 tsp. gelatin | 1/4 tsp. salt |
| 1 cup cold water | 1/2 cup evaporated milk |
| 1/2 cup sugar | 1/2 cup whipping cream |
| 1/2 cup evaporated milk | 1 cup blanched almonds, browned |
| 1 cup boiling water | |

Soak gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Caramelize the sugar by sifting it into a hot frying pan. Constantly shaking to prevent burning. Add diluted milk to caramel and set back of stove until caramel is dissolved. Add salt and gelatin to milk-caramel mixture and set in a pan of water to thicken. Combine chill and whip the evaporated milk and cream. Found the browned almonds when the gelatin mixture begins to set, fold in the whipped cream and nuts.

- Orange Bavarian
- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1 1/2 tsp. gelatin | 1/4 tsp. salt |
| 1 cup cold water | 1/2 cup evaporated milk |
| 1/2 cup sugar | 1/2 cup whipping cream |
| 1/2 cup evaporated milk | |

Soak gelatin in cold water, add sugar and orange juice and heat over hot water. Gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat, add salt and lemon juice. Cool in a pan of cold water, stirring occasionally until mixture begins to thicken. Combine evaporated milk and cream, chill and whip. Fold into gelatin mixture.

Frog Farm on Large Scale

One of the largest frog farms in the country is under construction near Denton, Texas. Several dams are being built and a low, swampy region already plentiful with frogs, is being further stocked. The frogs will be raised for Texas and other markets. One of the preliminary operations was the draining of the lakes to get rid of fish, a menace to frogs. Several miles of fence will be built round the lakes to keep out snakes, another enemy of frogs. The several lakes will be used for frogs of different ages.—Indianapolis News.

POULTRY AND HOGEXPERT COMING.

Dr. H. F. Emick, of the Research department of the George H. Lee company, Omaha, Nebraska, will speak on the Diseases of Poultry and Swine, Their Cause, Treatment and Prevention, May 18, at 2 o'clock at Cloverdell Poultry farm.

He will also conduct a Post-mortem demonstration clinic, teaching all who attend to easily recognize the common ailments of poultry and swine. This demonstration is of great value to every poultry and hog raiser, because the successful treatment of any trouble depends upon an accurate diagnosis and prompt action. Thousands of dollars are lost by farmers every year because of their inability to recognize trouble until it is well started when, if taken in time, loss could have been prevented. Hear this expert and be prepared. You may not be having any losses now, but the time will surely come when the information gained will pay big dividends.

Everyone who has been losing any chickens or pigs, or who has chickens or pigs that are not doing well, is urged to bring a specimen or two for examination and receive free instructions on the treatment, cause and prevention of the trouble. Urge your neighbor to do likewise. The more specimens brought in, the better the demonstration will be. There will be no admission charge, and no one will be solicited to buy anything, inasmuch as this meeting will be held purely for educational purposes with regard to the prevention of disease among poultry and swine. Come! and bring your poultry and pig troubles with you.

WHY CIRCUS OF RINGLING IS BIGGEST

One Hundred Double Length
Cars to Handle This Gigantic Enterprise.

A circus so big that it requires two added rings, eight stages, a wider hippodrome track and a 700-foot long big top to display its marvels is now headed this way. It is the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined shows, to give performances at Columbus, May 27.

The five rings now used have been made necessary to present the added attractions got together in the spring to celebrate the combined shows first appearance in New York's New Madison Square Garden. This edifice is the biggest ever built for circus purposes. To fittingly dedicate it the Ringling Brothers themselves spent several months in Europe mobilizing the biggest circus in history. This same show that for weeks entertained New York's millions is now on tour under canvas.

The tournament is as brilliant as in the past but has been enlarged by the addition of such novelties as zebras and llamas broken to harness and hitched to gem-studded floats. Wee baby elephants ride at the tops of allegorical cars. The menagerie of more than a thousand animals embraces thirteen elephant youngsters with the smallest stationed side by side with the biggest pachyderms in captivity. Another innovation is the largest and handsomest tiger of which there is record.

Performing horse acts are now presented in quintet—a troupe in each of the five rings. Those elephants who are performers appear in similar formation—five herds at one time. The number of men and women aerialists, bareback riders, gymnasts and high-wire performers has been increased to eight hundred. There are three hundred and fifty trained horses two hundred of which appear in a single display. One hundred double length cars are required to handle this gigantic amusement enterprise.

Making for Matrimony

Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers was ridiculing the proposed campaign to abolish short skirts.

"The modern girl's dress isn't a menace to morality," she said. "It encourages morality. The percentage of marriages has increased since dress has become more—well, more modern."

Mrs. Rogers added with a laugh: "I heard a story the other day about a lady who entertained a dozen modern young men and girls at her country house during the holidays. Well, when that gay dozen left for home there were 32 engagements among the party."

Low-Growing Fruits Require Protection

Burning Oil in Heaters Has Proven Satisfactory.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Burning fuel oil in hard pall heaters has proved a successful method of obtaining a rise in temperature on the cranberry bogs near the mouth of the Columbia river in Washington. Local weather bureau officials assisted in making a test of the efficiency of these heaters for the purpose. The flooding of the bogs for frost protection as is done in Wisconsin and the Atlantic coast cranberry sections is not practicable in Washington.

The heaters are set on metal tripods forced several inches into the ground so that the strong winds which sometimes blow in this district cannot overturn them. Forty ten-quart hard pall heaters were used on a half-acre plot. They were equipped one night with "soot-arresters" or "spiders," and used one night without them.

The frost on the two nights of the test caused about 15 per cent damage in a check plot 300 feet distant, not equipped with heaters. There was no damage in the test plot. Both plots were similarly situated with regard to topography and atmospheric conditions. The fuel oil burned cost 6 cents a gallon in barrel lots, and the cost of the heating was 90 cents an acre per hour with the soot-arresters in place. Without them the cost was $3 per acre per hour.

It is believed by the weather bureau men who made the test that similar good results can be secured in protecting other low-growing crops, such as strawberries, tomatoes and potatoes.

Tomato Wilts Prevented With Resistant Strains

The wilts of tomatoes, of which three forms are known, are caused by moldlike fungi or by bacteria which live in the soil and infect the plants through their roots. Wilting and yellowing leaves indicate the presence of these diseases.

Fusarium wilt, the form most widely distributed, causes the plants to wilt and die slowly, while bacterial wilt is frequently more prompt in its action. Efforts should be directed to the prevention rather than to the cure of these diseases. The planting of wilt resistant strains or varieties is advisable in order to control the Fusarium wilt. A variety of tomato known as Norton is highly resistant to Fusarium and well adapted to sections where the disease is prevalent.

Fusarium wilt should not be confused with another tomato disease prevalent in Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions and variously known as blight, western blight and western yellow blight. This disease and Fusarium wilt frequently occur in the same fields. The Norton tomato is resistant to the Fusarium wilt but varieties markedly resistant to western yellow blight have not yet been developed.

Spraying or Dusting to Control Harmful Worms

The tomato fruitworm, also known as the bollworm (not boll weevil) of cotton and the corn earworm, causes heavy losses of early tomatoes in the Southern states by eating into the fruit and destroying its market value, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

A large amount of damage can be prevented by either spraying or dusting the tomato fruits with an arsenical. If a spray is desirable, use two pounds of lead arsenate to fifty gallons of water or bordeaux mixture. The dust should be used at the rate of one pound of lead arsenate to five pounds of hydrated lime or one pound of paris green to twenty pounds of hydrated lime. Calcium arsenate can be used at the rate of one pound to five pounds of hydrated lime. The first spraying or dusting should be applied when the earliest tomato fruits are beginning to form or when the first worm damage is noticed and the arsenical applications should be repeated at weekly intervals for about seven weeks. All sprayed fruit should be thoroughly wiped before it is marketed or consumed.

Windbreaks to Protect the Crops and Orchard

That windbreaks are, as a whole, an asset, particularly in regions with little rainfall and where strong, drying winds are frequent, is shown by studies made by the United States Department of Agriculture. Windbreaks protect grain crops and orchards from mechanical injury by the wind, reduce evaporation of moisture from the soil, protect farm buildings from the extremes of winter and summer weather, and may also be a source of wood for farm use or sale. The ideal windbreak would have the tallest trees planted in the central rows; on either side rows of shorter trees; and outside of these, low bushes or cedars.

Strong Ewe Best Buy

The ewe to buy is the strong, healthy ewe with a straight, broad back and sound udder, sound teeth and a heavy fleece of reasonable fineness. Such an ewe when bred to a good Shropshire or Hampshire ram may be depended on to produce a good lamb. Ewes four to six years old produce the best lambs and are easier to handle, but are not worth as much money as yearlings because they are too near the end of their usefulness.

Washington's Church

The church which General Washington attended was given the name "Pohick Church" on account of its proximity to Pohick Run. This was probably so named because of the many hickory trees growing there. Pawcohicora, a food of the Algonquian Indians of Virginia, was made of the pounded nut kernels and water. The name was transferred by the whites to the tree bearing the nuts, and was shortened to pohickery and finally to hickory.

It could hardly be called that.

Yet, many a time it has been said that it is a crime to let shoes go too long before having them resoled.

"Irish Luck" the picture Thomas Meighan went to Ireland to make opened a two days run at the Met theater yesterday. The story, directed for the screen by Victor Heerman, was adapted by Tom Geraghty from Norman Venner's Saturday evening Post serial, "An Imperfect Imposter." Lois Wilson is featured at the head of the cast.

Meighan, as Tom Donahue, directs traffic on Fifth avenue at Fifty-ninth street, New York City, little dreaming that a few weeks would see him with his hands full of adventure in foreign lands. But that's just what happens when he wins a newspaper popularity contest and goes to Ireland.

From the moment he puts his foot on "the old sod" the action starts—a band of conspirators, who plan to do a pretty girl and her brother, a young nobleman, out of their lawful inheritance, are involved. And when the plot is all rounded up in jail where they belong, Tom sails for home again. Instead of an armful of shamrocks to convince the boys of his precinct that he has really been to Ireland, Tom Donahue takes back—a bride—which makes him the brother-in-law of an earl.

Meighan is Irish. The title of this picture is Irish. Tom has never before been seen in an Irish story, but it's sure bet that, after seeing "Irish Luck," you'll be hollering for more like this one. It's the finest thing Tom Meighan's ever done. And that's something.

Mother Nature Equips

Birds With Snowshoes

Like hens, partridges are scratchers. They are inhabitants of our northern temperate region. In the winter their toes become equipped with a fringe of strong horny points which act as snowshoes.

If we examine the feet of one of the little shore birds we shall find their toes also edged with a thin fleshy membrane, which becomes a slight web between the bases of the toes.

The hind toes of the scratchers, shore birds and of many others are more or less elevated and abbreviated. The black-billed plover has four toes. All other plovers are three-toed, having no hind toe. Coots and grebes have the membrane along the toes in the form of lobes, so that we speak of them as having lobated toes. Gulls, terns, loons, auks, petrels and their relatives have webs filling completely the spaces between the three front toes. Gannets, cormorants, pelicans and frigate birds have all four toes webbed. Webbed or partially webbed toes means equipment for soft walking or swimming. All those with fully webbed toes swim and most of them may be found on soft, sandy beaches.

Pioneer Voyager

A little band of Huguenots at Port Royal built a pinnace in 1562, in which they returned to France in the winter of 1562-3. This is thought to be the first American-built ship to cross the ocean.

MORE THAN HALF ARE FORDS.

The County Clerk's record of bills of sale filed by Pickaway county owners of new automobiles and trucks show that for the month of April, 1926 thirty-two were Fords and thirty were cars of other makes.

The new cars other than Fords were as follows: nine Dodge cars, six Chevrolets, five Buicks, three Studebakers, three Overlands, two Chryslers, one Essex and one Jewett.

Beside the cars shown above, Pickaway county dealers sold twenty-two cars that were delivered to points outside of this county but the bills of sale for which were filed here.

THE AMERICAN FARMERS ARE PROGRESSIVE

Rank Next to the Railroads in the Number of Mechanical Horsepower.

The American farmer has shown the greatest increase in the use of mechanical power, over any other industry of today.

Today the railroads of the United States rank highest in the number of mechanical horse power used and the farmer is a close second.

Horseflesh shows up as the most wasteful power in use today and since the farmer is learning more about bookkeeping, he is checking up on what he puts into and what he gets out of his horseflesh per horsepower and finds that one horse costs as much to feed as one cow, or ten pigs, or fourteen lambs or one hundred hens.

Along this same line he has learned that the money return value of a cow is $175 per year, ten pigs return $150 per year, fourteen lambs return $154 per year and one hundred hens return $300 per year, and with these groups you have an equal manure fertilizer return to that furnished by the horse.

With mechanical power the problem is solving the problem presented by the movement of the population of the country from farms to cities. With mechanical power he is increasing one man's productive capacity by three.

The American farmer is doing this without any hullabaloo or the help of congress. He has learned to meet more emergencies than any other type of business men. Blight, drought, windstorms, insect pests, hail storms, floods; he meets them all and comes out better prepared to meet the next catastrophe.

Ship Under Odd Flag

A ship without a country flies in the oil service out of San Pedro, Cal., and proves a puzzle to harbors of the world. It is the tanker Niobe, which carries gasoline from San Pedro to Hamburg, Germany. The Niobe was built in Germany during the war, and afterward allotted to the United States. While the United States did not accept ownership of the vessel, the shipping board controls it and allotted the tanker to the Standard Oil company. An American crew is carried, although the ship has no American papers. For a flag, the Niobe carries that of the interallied maritime council.

Saving Burglars' Time

A tag with this inscription, "This safe is never locked, turn the handle and it will open," has hung on the knob of the strong box of a fuel company at Tulare, Cal., for the last seven years. Although the statement is perfectly true, burglars do not believe it and have ransacked the safe three times. It is used only for protection of records against fire, and no money is kept in the safe.

Typical American Menu of Meat, White Bread, Potatoes and Beans Fails to Give "Pep" Elements

Addition of Leafy Vegetables to Regular Daily Fare Does Wonders.

Improper winter dieting is responsible for that languid, all-in feeling called spring fever, according to the investigations of nutrition experts. They point out that the typical American diet of bread, meat, potatoes and beans does not supply the necessary food elements to keep the body in good physical condition.

The problem the housewife has to solve for her family is: what foods shall I serve to correct this condition? The bread, meat, potato and bean diet does not supply the necessary dietary essentials known as vitamins; neither does it give a sufficiency of minerals.

Addition, however, of spring vegetables to the regular diet does wonders, for leafy vegetables are rich in both elements. The anaemic individual acquires color and his complexion clears when he begins to eat vegetables, for the reason that he is supplied with the various minerals he needs. His heart action improves because the vegetables supply calcium, sodium and potassium; his constipation is corrected because vegetables contain cellulose; his skin troubles clear because his blood is put in neutral condition; his appetite is sharpened and he feels "peppy" because he has received his quota of vitamins. The following recipes for spring vegetable dishes are recommended as an aid in correcting the deficient diets of winter:

- Spring Fever.
- Stuffed Lamb Chops Mint Jelly
- Pea Roast with Carrot Sauce
- New Potatoes
- Cucumber-Radish Salad
- Butter Rolls
- Strawberry Short Cake
- Coffee
- Stuffed Lamb Chops.
- Lamb chops Chicken livers
- Salt or Fresh mushrooms
- Pepper Have rib or loin chops cut in 2-inch pieces. Remove bone and outer skin. In rib chop make a slit and insert either a mushroom or a chicken liver near the long end. Draw end of chop around into a round, flat piece, and fasten with coarse thread. Place on greased broiler under a hot flame and brown on both sides. Lower rack, let broil, turning often, 15 or 20 minutes longer. Remove string, sprinkle with salt and pepper and dot with bits of butter. Remove to hot plate and serve at once.

Court of Appeals Affirms Lower Tribunal in Case Against the Trustees.

The court of appeals of Madison county has just handed down its decision in the Mt. Sterling Cemetery cases. There were three of these cases. The first was brought by Mary Bennett, Sophia O'Day, Mary F. McClimans, Laura B. Heath and Pearl B. May, the widow and heirs and devisees of William Bennett, deceased; the second case was brought by Alwilda Carpenter, the sole heir at law of Mrs. Milton M. Thomas; and the third case was brought by Lida L. Owens, Frances Lindenberg and Floy L. Hicks, the heirs and devisees of Joanna Hicks, deceased. These cases were brought against Job Renick, sexton, and J. L. Bower, Frank Winfough and R. Scott Redman, trustees of Pleasant cemetery, located in two townships, Darby township, Pickaway county, and Pleasant township, Madison county.

Pleasant cemetery is a union cemetery of Darby township, Pickaway county and Pleasant township, Madison county. In the first instance when laid out it was located wholly in Darby township and was then a Township cemetery controlled solely by the trustees of Darby township. It is now controlled and managed by the trustees of the two townships, and a board of cemetery trustees.

The court granted a permanent injunction to the plaintiff lot owners restraining the defendant sexton and trustees of Pleasant cemetery from removing or interfering with certain erections consisting of a marble fence, posts and steps on the Bennett lot and a series of granite posts ornamented by chains stretched from post to post on the Thomas lot and an iron fence around the Hicks lot had been removed a few days prior to the bringing of the suit by Lida L. Owens and others and the court requires the cemetery trustees to restore that fence and enjoins them from future interference therewith.

The trustees of Darby and Pleasant townships and of Pleasant cemetery several years ago adopted certain rules and regulations by which they sought to remove all enclosures around graves and burial lots of any description whatever that had been erected in the cemetery and in the summer 1924 the above defendants undertook to enforce the same against the above mentioned three old burial lots; the Bennett lot was purchased in 1874, the Thomas lot in 1876 and the Hicks lot in 1873, and they were the only lots in the cemetery which were enclosed, the enclosures in each instance having been erected prior to 1880. The tearing down of the iron fence surrounding the Hicks lot in the summer of 1924 and threatening to tear down and remove the other two precipitated these three law suits. Judge Hornbeck, of the common pleas court also decided in favor of the plaintiffs about a year ago, and the cemetery trustees carried the case up to the court of appeals.

The court of appeals among other things in its opinion says:

"At the time of the purchase of these lots the statute did not provide for rules and regulations by the township trustees in regard to the management of cemetery associations and similar erections were at one time protected by statute. The first authority given by statute to trustees to provide rules and regulations for cemetery associations was enacted subsequent to 1880 and could not, therefore, apply to existing erections lawful at the time and not objected to by the cemetery officials when erected.

"These improvements have been kept in good repair up to the date of the bringing of this action. In the Bennett case, the original owner, William Bennett, in his will provided a fund of $300 the income from which was to be invested for the beautification and keeping in repair of the burial lot. This fund passed into the hands of the cemetery association and is now retained by them. Under these circumstances, we are of the opinion that the trustees cannot, in good conscience, hold the fund and at the same time destroy or remove the improvements placed on said lot, and to which improvements the will of William Bennett evidently applied.

"The plaintiffs in the other two cases offer to provide a similar fund for the same purpose in respect to their lots."

Charles H. May, of this city, was the attorney for the plaintiffs in the Bennett case; A. T. Cordray, of London, attorney for plaintiffs in the Carpenter case, and Charles J. Pretzman, of Columbus, attorney for plaintiffs in the Owen case. Bowman & Bowman, of Springfield, and Murray and Emery, of London, were attorneys for the defendant cemetery trustees.

OLD WOMEN RULE BLOND INDIANS

Tribe Knows as Much About Sanitation as Does White Man.

Washington.—A tribe of Indians in which tow heads, white skins and hazel eyes predominate, which knows as much of sanitation as does the white man, and in which the old women wield supreme authority, furnishes the material for an interesting publication soon to be released by the Smithsonian institution. The tribe is the San Blas Indians of Panama, a branch of the Cunas. Herbert W. Krieger, curator of the Ethnology of the United States National museum, under direction of the Smithsonian institution, describes them in Museum Bulletin 133, bearing the title, "Material Culture of the People of South-eastern Panama."

Are these white Indians really Indians? Early investigators found it difficult to admit the paradox. Some suggested that the San Blas group were the descendants of an isolated Nordic or Viking strain. Others even went so far as to see in them the children of one of the ten "lost tribes" of Israel. But these romantic hypotheses have had to be discarded. Physical tests and measurements made by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, Smithsonian anthropologist, and others, leave no doubt that the San Blas Indians are pure bloods, resembling in detail of physical characteristics the famous Maya Indians of Yucatan, and forming possibly a connecting link with the equally advanced ancient Peruvians.

Origin in Doubt.

While students of anthropology and genetics have not yet come to a decision as to the origin of the blondness of these white San Blas Indians, they are pretty well convinced that it is a form of albinism. Albinos occur among practically all Indian races, and while the San Blas whites have not the characteristic pink eyes, some of the youths squint in the light. The determination of just what part heredity and environment may have played in fixing these unusual tendencies offers a problem of first importance.

Almost equally astonishing with their blondness is the fact that the San Blas Indians have remained pure bloods and resisted adulteration with invaders, Indian, negro or European. They have had to fight for this isolation and they still maintain in every one of their villages a special corps of police whose duty it is to warn of the approach of strangers and if necessary to drive them away. Racial pride has kept them free from intermarriage with other tribes.

It is natural to expect that so independent a race would have developed a high state of culture. "Some of the remarkable features of their civilization," Mr. Krieger writes, "stop but little short of what we with our European culture have liked to consider peculiarly our own achievement. They have a pictographic writing system that ranks but little below our own alphabet in efficiency. Their sculpture and carving in wood represent a high standard of taste. Their painting, embroidery and applied arts, such as applique sewing, rank with similar work of European peasants. "But still more phenomenal for a so-called primitive people is their knowledge of medicine. They treat fever, for example, in the most approved modern American fashion. The patient is kept cool and absolutely quiet. They know the mosquito to be a danger to health. Consequently they build their houses on small islands off the coast far from the breeding places of the mosquitoes, or on piles raised above the water. Sanitation is superior to that of most villages in the United States. The water supply is always brought from a distant spring or other undefiled source."

Excellent Sailors.

Mr. Krieger further describes this paragon of native races as excellent sailors. "In short," he says, "the tribe constitute a monument to the virility of aboriginal North American culture when undisturbed by the intrusive alien." And the explanation which he suggests for this superiority is feminine rule. "It is the women who wield the real authority. Men may be elected to office and become chief musician, doctor, or village chief, but it is the elder women who tell the voters whom to elect. A young married man always goes to live with his mother-in-law and takes orders from her."

In contrast with the independence and virility of the Cuna Indians is the gregariousness of the Choco Indians who dwell on the Pacific side of the isthmus and are divided from the Cuna by the mountainous interior. They have intermarried so much with negroes and Asiatics that the native villages have practically disappeared. A much less cultured people than the San Blas, the Chocos yet excel in certain architectural achievements. Their spirit lodges show an excellent form of mortising and joinery, a practice not known to other South American tribes.

Peculiar to the culture of the Choco Indians, says Mr. Krieger, are their ceremonial harvest festivals, in which the chief converses with carved and painted spirits of animals and men to discover whether the season's crops will succeed or fail.

TWENTY-NINE

Defendants In National "Gin Trust" Will Go On Trial Tuesday.

Cleveland, May 10.—(U.P.)—Twenty-nine of the 111 defendants indicted in the government probe into the national "gin trust" are to be arraigned in Federal court before Judge Paul Jones here tomorrow.

Officials in charge of the probe expect that 50 per cent of those arraigned will plead guilty. Seventeen are from Cleveland, seven from Minneapolis, two from St. Paul and three from California.

Four have already pleaded guilty.

At least 60 new indictments will be returned against additional conspirators, Assistant U. S. District Attorney Miles Evans has confidentially announced. Evidence against them is now being gathered.

HARTMAN THEATER.

"Under Cover," a mystery drama by Roi Cooper Megrue, author of the well known farce, "It Pays to Advertise," has been chosen as this week's offering by the Hartman Stock company under the direction of John Hayden. "Under Cover" enjoyed a long run when it was first produced in the Cort theater, New York, with William Courtenay in the leading role.

It has action aplenty, with thrill after thrill until the final curtain. Primarily the story has to do with the U. S. custom officers attempt to run down certain expert diamond smugglers. Amy Cartwright has foolishly sold her sister Ethel's diamonds to satisfy a gambling debt, and has collected their value from a burglary insurance company. With this information in his power, Daniel Taylor, a deputy in the customs, force the refined and innocent Ethel, against her inclination, to enter the custom service as a spy to "get the goods" on Steven Denby, a young society man whom she has met in Paris and fallen in love with, but who in reality has smuggled a valuable pearl necklace on his recent return from Europe.

The plot from then on has many astonishing twists and turns and it is not until the final curtain that the denouement comes and the entire plot unravels. Steven Denby is to be played by the popular leading man, Donn Cook, and his performance of this role promises to be a real delight. Jean Ford will play the part of Ethel, and others of the company will be in the supporting cast. "Under Cover" looks like a real thriller. Don't miss it!

Don't forget that dancing in the foyer to Allen Hale's orchestra starts thirty minutes before the play, during intermission and after each matinee, plays thirty minutes longer.

Matinees Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

(By Margaret Krumm.)
Cleveland, May 10.—(U.P.)—Bigger and better than ever is the annual exhibition of Cleveland artists, which opened last week at the Cleveland Museum of Art. Moderns and classics, Neo-art and old-time art mingle in the exhibition. Shively's pieces of realism are among the most intriguing. They are patterned after the journalistic modernistic trend in literature. They look like a portrait of a "dirty back yard." They are Sandburgian in their stark, naked reality.

H. G. Keller's five schapes, water and oil, are among the most interesting and vivid.

With a taste for things worthwhile, which we had not credited to the Ohio metropolis, we learn that Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" is one of the books most in demand at the Cleveland Public Library. The story of Clyde Griffiths, once it gets started, and particularly in the second volume (for it takes Dreiser two full books to tell his tale) is gripping, and once having read it one feels as though a hard day's golf had been followed by 10 sets of tennis and a 20 mile run. It takes such a hold of the reader that it is physically exhausting.

Robert McLaughlin's annual summer stock season got under way at the Ohio Theatre here today with "The Family Upstairs" as the opening number. As usual, McLaughlin plans to try out embryo plays to see how they look before they strike Broadway.

EIGHT RESIDENCES STRUCK DURING ELECTRICAL STORM

Cincinnati, May 9.—Eight residences were struck by lightning late today when one of the severest electrical storms that has struck Cincinnati in many years swept over the eastern section of the city.

A $4,000 fire, damages to several houses and the disabling of telephone, telegraph and fire department wires in that portion of the city were the principal results of the storm. No one was injured.

Value of Liming in Improvement of Soil

Productivity Greatly Increased by Application.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The productivity of many soils can be greatly increased by the application of lime. Lime acts various ways; it helps to break down organic matter, it corrects acidity, and it improves the physical condition of the soil. By hastening decomposition of the organic matter, lime helps to make such matter available as plant food for whatever crops may be grown. Lime should not be applied to soils deficient in organic matter, however, especially in warm humid climates, without taking steps to maintain or increase the supply of this essential ingredient, as otherwise the outcome will be a decline in yields. The best way to increase the amount of organic matter in the soil is to apply manure or turn under green crops, such as crimson clover, cowpeas, soy beans, red clover, and hairy vetch. On some low-yielding land the turning under of a good growth of crimson clover has doubled the yield of the succeeding crop.

Lime is frequently used to correct acidity, a condition widely found in the eastern part of the United States, and detrimental to the growth of certain crops.

Another result accomplished by liming is an improvement in the physical condition of the soil. Soils of a compact nature are rendered more permeable, in consequence of which they become more retentive of moisture, less likely to wash, and more friable. Sandy soils also are benefited, being made more retentive of moisture. Application of lime is particularly beneficial in the case of leguminous crops such as clover and alfalfa. Liming may also increase the availability of other minerals, such as potash, by rendering them more soluble.

Detailed information relative to liming soils may be obtained from state agricultural colleges or the United States Department of Agriculture.

Good Points to Observe in Raising Baby Chicks

The old adage "blood will tell" is a true one in regard to baby chicks, according to J. W. Lumb, Kansas state agricultural veterinarian. A dangerous chicken disease, bacillary white diarrhea, is transmitted through the egg of the mother hen to her offspring, according to Lumb, and while the infected hens show no visible symptoms of the disease the germ is present and affects the young. As a rule the noninfected hen will produce 30 more eggs annually than will an infected hen. While the eggs of the former have a higher percentage of hatchability and the per cent of livable chicks from the noninfected hens is four times as large as the number of chicks from diseased hens.

Cardinal points to observe in either hatching, buying or raising baby chicks are:

1. Procure eggs or chicks from tested flocks or flocks known to be free from disease.
2. Do not hatch eggs from tested and non-tested flocks in the same incubator.
3. Disinfect incubators, brooders and houses.
4. Raise chicks on ground not used for that purpose the previous year.
5. Follow a carefully worked-out system of brooding and feeding and thus maintain all the natural resistance of the chicks to disease.

Rotation Is Advisable in Producing Tomatoes

In the production of tomatoes crop rotation is advisable regardless of soil type or locality. By this means losses caused by insects and diseases are materially reduced. In an ideal rotation tomatoes will not follow tomatoes nor will there be included potatoes, peppers, or egg plant, because of the danger that the latter crops may transmit diseases affecting the tomato. In general, tomatoes should be grown in a rotation covering at least four years and including one cultivated crop in addition to the tomatoes and one or more soil-building crops.

Farm Hints

Put hens through a thorough anti-house course before warm weather.

Plant potatoes, so as to bring on the new crop just as quickly as possible.

Some farmer is going to cash in on future horse demand, though, by raising colts now.

Poor ventilation is largely responsible for damp litter. Give the poultry house plenty of air.

If that dairy calf is to grow into a good cow giving a good milk yield and salable on the block, it must be properly fed.

Even a pig likes to be clean and the young pigs farrowed this spring will make better growth and be healthier if they are raised in clean quarters.

Breaching is one part of the harness that won't be needed much in the fields this spring. But tugs and collars will be, and your horses can get into their collars with better energy if the harness has been oiled and softened.

OLENTANGY A. C.

Defeated Circleville Eagles Sunday Afternoon In One-sided Game.

The Circleville Eagles were disastrously defeated yesterday by a score of 14 to 1 at the hands of the Olentangy A. C. While it was a terribly one-sided contest it was rather interesting, inasmuch as it was a slugfest on the visitors' part.

Five pitchers were used by the locals in an effort to stem the tide. Rector started and receives the credit for the loss, although most of the runs were made after he left the mound. Freck Greeno finished the game, and looked like the best of the bunch.

The Eagles were handicapped by the absence of several players whom they had depended upon. Too, they have not yet found their batting eye, and will undoubtedly offer a sterner offense as the season goes on.

Outside of the disastrous sixth inning it was a very fair contest. The crowd was a good natured one and they enjoyed the flood rather well.

Here's hoping that things look up in the future.

Batteries—Columbus, Gaa and Ballenger; Circleville, Rector, Baucher, Owens, Garner, Greeno and McCollister and O'Donnell. Umpire—Mr. Davis.

A NEW INTER- PRETATION OF PAUL'S LETTER

Chicago, May 10.—A new interpretation of Paul's letter to the Galatians tending to reveal a struggle in the early Christian church which menaced its foundations and which was similar in many ways to present church controversies has been given at the University of Chicago by Dean Shailer Matthews. His comment is published by the American Institute of Sacred Literature as an introduction to a modern translation of the letter by Prof. Edgar J. Goodspeed.

"Paul's indignant letter to the Galatians is the magna charta of religious liberty," Dean Matthews asserts. "It is not a theological treatise. The real subject was much more vital than the struggle between gentile Christians and Jewish Christians, who held that allegiance to the old laws was tantamount to genuine Christianity. It was really one which we face today."

"Now, as then, we have to decide whether Christians must look back to the law, or forward to Christ for spiritual guidance. Now, as then, we have to determine whether the authority of the past shall control the future."

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The members of the Young Ladies' Bible class of the Presbyterian church entertained their mothers to a banquet in kind remembrance of "Mothers' day. Covers were laid for seventy guests. The long tables in the social rooms were beautifully decorated. Hand painted cards marked the places for each guest and miniature rosebud cups with salted almonds, amidst the carnations that graced the place of every mother presented a pleasing and beautiful sight. The room was artistically decorated with baskets of white and white and orchid lilacs. At the close of the dinner hour a delightful program was rendered. Mrs. W. W. Robinson gave an address of welcome and a poem by Edgar A. Guest entitled "Home." Two vocal selections by Miss Helen Marion; Miss Alice Pedrick introduced Mrs. E. S. Toensmeier, who gave a beautiful talk on "Mothers." Mrs. Harry Heffner rendered two vocal selections and Miss Margaret Clark, a reading on "Mothers of Great Men." Mrs. Clark Will gave a vocal solo and musical reading entitled "Robinson Crusoe." This closed the program for the evening and a social hour followed. The committee in charge was Misses Helen Bennett, Ethel Rife, Elizabeth Roth and Mrs. Marvin Dresbach, Mrs. Orrin Dresbach and Mrs. Walter Downing. Other members of the class assisted.

Declares Crow Is Not as Black as Painted

Washington.—The crow is not as black as he is painted, in the opinion of the Department of Agriculture, and it recommends that farmers inflict the death penalty on them only in extreme cases. Sprouting corn is only one item of a varied crow menu, which includes many insects, the department states. A trap has been invented which will really catch the wary crows. The department asserts, recommending its use or the employment of warnings to the feathered pirates where they are too numerous.

The utility of the bat as a mosquito exterminator has been held by the Department of Agriculture to be rather doubtful. This flying mammal relishes mosquitoes, but the Mexican free-tailed variety, which has a potentially valuable appetite, won't colonize satisfactorily.

Some cities in the South have gone so far as to build and furnish special "bat-belfries" as an inducement for them to settle down and enter the mosquito exterminating industry, but the free apartments persistently remain vacant.

Effect of Coffee Drinking

Coffee owes its well-known stimulating action to the presence of the alkaloid caffeine. This substance has a diuretic action upon the kidneys and raises blood pressure. This influence upon blood pressure is probably the reason sleepiness may be prevented by partaking of coffee. Muscular energy is augmented and the sense of fatigue dissipated by the use of this stimulant.

Saved Rock Paintings

When a consignment of rock arrived at London from Rhodesia some time ago it was found to be covered with a thick growth of lichens. Hidden underneath were rock paintings dating back probably to the Stone age. To scrape off the plants with a knife would have been disastrous. Someone suggested smearing the lichens with ammonia, which peeled them off easily.
